

Thank You

Dedicated volunteer, Christi Allison, hands out stickers on a trip to Guatemala.

QUARTERLY PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS - SPECIAL EDITION
Highlighting YOU, our special supporters!
Summer 2018

You matter to people in crisis around the world. Take a look at some of the life-saving care you are providing.

You're providing malaria testing and treatment for refugees in Uganda.

You're helping teach mothers in Guatemala how to prevent disease with good hygiene.

You're providing free dental care, right here in the U.S.

You're sending medical supplies to treat Syrians injured by bombings.

The Head and the Heart

By Beth Weibling

My passion for philanthropy began with my mom. As a junior higher, I watched my mom get up at 5 a.m. every morning to drive into the crime-ridden city of Camden, New Jersey. There, she gave methadone to heroin users to help them go to work so they could support their families.

Fortunately, I married a man, Dennis, who encourages my passions! My line became “you make the money and I’ll give it away”. He truly does agree with this! Seriously, Dennis brought the brains to my passion for philanthropy.

Dennis’ day job is working in private equity investments. He knows how to perform the due diligence prior to investing in a company. He applies the same due diligence prior to investing in a non-profit.

As part of this due diligence, we created a list of criteria that non-profits we support have to meet. Medical Teams was one organization that met our tough standards.

A Family Affair

By Christi Allison

Medical Teams International is a very important part of our lives. From the moment we attended our first Field of Dreams Auction to our life-changing trip to Guatemala to my weekly volunteer tasks in the office, we have become better people through helping others.

We love that our financial contribution goes directly to those in need, not only in far-away countries, but also right here in our own neighborhoods. I’ll never forget the joyous looks on my kids’ faces as they taught Guatemalan children how to play “tag” and “duck duck goose”. The lessons learned through helping and the happiness that follows are Medical Teams’ greatest gifts to us.

The Allison family volunteering in Guatemala in 2016.

Medical Teams cares for the most vulnerable, hurting people in our world.

They are smart in their approach. Skilled staff develop sustainable programs and closely track their impact. They partner with local and international agencies so the right care gets to the right places. Finally, they increase their impact through the use volunteers.

Dennis and I invest our time and money in Medical Teams because they break down barriers to health and boldly do their work as the hands and feet of Jesus. As “the head and the heart”, we are grateful to invest in life-saving medical care for people in crisis around the world.

Beth and Dennis have invested their time, talents and treasures in Medical Teams for over 13 years.

To Whom Much is Given, Much is Required

By Dametra Johnson-Marletti

My faith leads me to believe that to whom much is given, much is required. As I look around the world at so much pain, despair and inequity, it is not lost on me that were it not for His grace, there would be me and my family. It is therefore squarely on my heart to take the resources that I have been blessed with and try to use them to make a difference in the world.

Dametra catches a football at this year’s Field of Dreams dinner and auction.

I believe in the work that Medical Teams does and can see the sustainable difference they are making in the lives of so many. To know that in some small way my donations, which my company so generously matches, are part of that, just feels right to me.